In a world where the time has come to take sides, everyone has their own battle plan. The Republic has stood for centuries but these days, the power is shifting to the three monarchies. Each of them has its own strategy, and each one wants to crush their rivals. The Ring wants to destroy the world itself. The Box plans to take everything. The City thinks it can buy its way to victory. None of these plans have any real respect for the ones they affect. That is why it takes three to play… one of them to be the winner. The battle rages on. The Box is a tile-based battle game with a focus on strategic thinking and player interactions. Many different kinds of strategic setups, different victory conditions, and puzzles abound. This is a game for everyone who ever played Rock, Paper, Scissors with friends on the playground. We believe this strategy game idea has potential and would like to make it the most accessible experience it can be. We have already made significant progress on this, with a playable demo available for download on steam and a playable online demo that people have shown interest in. We are currently thinking about adding team objectives, giving everyone a more even playing field, as well as giving it more variety in victory conditions. This project comes with our interest in carefully building a studio for the future. Our hope is to make games for the long term. Not just for a game, or for a commercial release, but for something that will be permanently available. It is our wish that this studio will become part of a larger company if everything comes out as we want. Crowdfunding is a new way of funding creative projects. We prefer to use crowdfunding to find our potential players, and not show them our games beforehand to convince them. This is a project that we are personally invested in. Our love of games is what brought us together, and we feel this project is the best way for us to collaborate as a team. We love strategy games, and we want to show you what we think is possible with them. We love to play games, and we know we have the skill to make these games. With your help, we can make the best possible product. About the Project: This is a game that takes inspiration from 2D fighting games. All

FEATURES

The 3 Blind Mice VR Game App uses the Unity VR SDK. The game runs on any VR device that complies with the Job Simulator requirements. On a Rift and Valve Index, the VR layer uses the Oculus Home installer to fetch the latest version of the game. On the HTC Vive, the VR layer uses Steam VR to download the latest version of the game.

The game was designed with the Unity Interface to the Unity editor (www.unity3d.com). The game utilizes the 3D Model from Cinematic Hunter (www.cinematichunter.com) to create a randomly themed 3D world. It is designed using Unity Shaders and textures. The 3D environment is designed to sit on top of real flat ground, allowing a personal experience.

The game is designed using the sound engine that is built in the Unity library but enhanced to output realistic sounds. This is a representative of the VR to non-VR conversion. The game music is recorded in a real environment in real time.

The game uses the Holodeck Framework 3D engine which emulates an infinite loop to provide a lasting experience. The Holodeck Framework is a turn-based game engine that allows the player to progress in the game again and again without the need for user interaction.

The game has been designed with the concept that the experience should be personal. The game uses simple controls with realistic mouse and touch interactions. The game also implements a progress bar to add a feeling of

3 Blind Mice has been developed with the sole purpose of making the player feel uncomfortable. It's a bawdy, bloody and chaotic second person exploration horror game with a comedic tone, where the player gets to interact with a bunch of disturbing and often disturbing situations. Instead of relying on jump scares, 3 Blind Mice relies on the player to make a decision about where to go next, to have to control where they go within the three dimensional space of the game. Features Indie Game: Tentacle Erector-: The Tentacle Erector will create different animals, creatures and characters, either to fulfill the player's wishes or to look after the player. Depending on the level, a different number of tentacles, hearts, eyes and other body parts will be created. It's a game where the player can choose their own game. Interact with everything: In 3 Blind Mice, you can interact with almost everything. You'll need to interact with animals, the environments, the cursor and the enemies. You can give them either life or leave them to decay. You have no choice but to take charge of every situation you are confronted with and apply it to your game. Ride in the "chicken bus": Riding in the "chicken bus" is just one of the many ways in which the player can travel throughout the game. It's a fully enclosed three-dimensional area where the player can go wherever they want. You'll interact with many things in this area and open the way for new locations. No Backtracking: There will always be no backtracking through each individual location in the game. The player can only choose the way he wants to go. Gameplay: 3 Blind Mice is a third person horror adventure game where the player can choose where to go in the three dimensional space of the game by selecting the place or object they wish to interact with. Defining the genre: 3 Blind Mice is a third person exploratory horror game where the player decides the direction they want to go in. You'll have to make a decision about every situation you're presented with. This decision will affect the way you approach and interact with the location. The game is designed to feel scary and disturbing, but there is always a sense of humour and whimsy about it. You'll have to decide how you want to approach d41b202975

Rock, Paper, ShotgunHow was your past week? I guess if it was worse than week 7, your week was certainly no less interesting than a certain teenage girl's week, what with the deleted Xbox Games Gallery, Nancy Grace's just announced Boycott Indiana, a giant police action-adventure set in the '70s, the latter half of which involves the collapse of justice. The point is, whatever is happening to you, there are other people in your life who've had worse weeks, so give it up and think about the future. In a lot of ways, it's never too early to start laying foundations for the future; by the time you're 16 you've probably got a pretty solid idea what you're going to study in university, and it's not too late to tell yourself you want to do that. This week, we're having a chat with someone who's pretty much done all of that - Emma Gannon. Pawel: Where are you from? Emma: I was born and raised in Los Angeles, California, and I go to school in New York, in Brooklyn, a school called Pratt. Pawel: Are you saying you like the girl who plays the science smart ex-hippy girl, not the scientist? Emma: I was never a science smart girl; science was my worst subject. I hated it with a vengeance. What I like is showing off how you can use your brain, how you can come up with the kind of science that is fun and fascinating to you. Pawel: What did you want to be when you were 16? Emma: I think everyone's always told you that you have to pick what you want to be when you're 16. It's a kind of crushing feeling because you think about the whole thing, like what's this major going to look like? What are these courses going to look like? Then you're going to go into University, and if you're lucky you're going to do this... Pawel: What happened then? Emma: I kind of landed in film studies and philosophy. I like both of them; they're so different. I like that you can be a philosopher and still go to movies all the time. I like the idea that philosophy can inform film studies, but you can also look at them in the other way around. So I guess when I was 16 I wanted to be an actress and a

INTRO

The 16-year-old boy has finished his algebra course, his Mathematical textbook, his Math Club's Mironish Matematiyks, and his About Mathematics and Sygnys textbook. However, he hasn't got any certificate of summiting the maths course. For him, like in an interesting documentary by upvideo.ru, mathematics is a fascinating science, which makes life easier and interesting, but it's too difficult for him. In this game you'll be a pseudo-math teacher. The boy will make some mistakes. You'll give him the help he needs to succeed. You will have to show him the beautiful theory, which is mathematics.

PREPARATION

Design of a proper graphics depends on the system resources your graphics card has. However, if your system is not powerful, then don't despair. Most important, the game should be playable on low PCs.
